I recently mined some pretty obscure and some not so obscure - CDs from my collection on my PC using both iTunes and the recent beta version of Windows 11 Media Player. Along the way, I discovered annoying anomalies in both applications in the way they extract information from their respective CD information databases. Over the years, I've been gradually mining my cd collection. The situation today, when it comes to getting information about music CDs, is much better than the early days of CDBB (now Gracenote). But it's far from ideal. Now that I have a pretty good setup for broadcasting digital music around the house, I wanted to make music more widely available to other family members. This means moving a lot of classical music CDs we have on our hard drive since my wife isn't big into classical music. For some reason, I rip using iTunes and Windows Media Player using the corresponding lossless codes of each player. Both seem to handle cd data differently. Apple's iTunes uses the aforementioned Gracenote database. Microsoft manages its own CD-ROM database. There also seems to be disruptions in both, in some cases. Take, for example, Gorecki's Symphony No. 3. The first time you insert a CD, Windows Media Player 11 does not recognize the content. But if you manually tell WMP11 to get cd information, you'll get the full list. On the other hand, iTunes immediately recognized the CD and correctly identified the tracks and tag. However, she could not supply album art. When you're trying to manually get an album art, there seems to be available: ironically, I added an album cover to iTunes by copying a bit card that was stored in the Windows Media Player 11 library. Let's be even more obscure. My wife's aunt, Erid Katahn, is a classical pianist who has had a number of CDs published by smaller labels. I ripped a CD of Pierre Dubois' tracks, played by Katcha, on both players. Again iTunes identified information about the CD, artist, and tracking, but no illustration. WMP11 was completely baffled. When I manually tried to add album information, WMP11 service WMP11 was dissatisfied. Then, on a whim, I tried to find album information by artist name: So let's click next and see what we find: Clicking on dubious music for piano recording and clicking next gives what we need: So why would a Windows media player identify the CD when it was inserted? Asking minds would like to know. I had similar results with less obscure classic CDs. For example, let's look at Telemann: Suites Concerto in D Major. But when I manually searched the database, the correct information appeared: Once again, iTunes found the right CD, but lacked album cover: Now let's dig into my beloved musical past. I have a few guilty pleasures and I recognize to the whole world that I have a problem. It's embarrassing, I know, but here it is: I have a CD of Emerson, Lakes and Palmer's Works Vol. 1, one of the most pompous, crowded chunks of progressive rock since an era of crowded, pompous progressive rock. It's definitely a guilty pleasure. Apple's software gets all the tracks straight from both CDs (it's two grounders), but I had to add a tag (live) to distinguish additional live tracks from studio tracks. (There were no live tracks on the original version of Works Vol. 1. Microsoft manages mangle cd information in a different way: That's right, we don't have song data, but the album cover is correct. Actually, I'm a little unfair here. The Microsoft database recognized CD 1 correctly, but included all the song information from both CDs, even if I only had a ripped CD1. When I inserted CD2, a screenshot above appeared. I had to manually split the songs that were on CD2 from the CD1 list, which contained all the songs. In fact, I might just leave in one listing. But Microsoft's database seemed to contain data from an earlier version of Works Vol. 1, as the live tracks added were unknown. I had to manually add them. Read about getting audiophile sound wirelessly throughout your home. I certainly understand the difficulties inherent in the kind of pattern recognition required for ID CDs properly, since music CDs do not have information about the metadata stored on them. But you'd think that record publishers would actually send the correct information to Gracenote or Microsoft... but then maybe not. The RIAA probably thinks it encourages piracy. These are just some of my problems. There was a time WMP10 tore up Mark Knopfler's CD (Sailing in Philadelphia) and proceeded to create five or six different recordings, with one or two songs, for each of the different artists who worked with Knopfler. So, if you were looking for Mark Knopfler, you'd only find two songs from that album. What is the name of this song again? This week at ExtremeTech eating away for the next three weeks, heading to England and Scotland with family. That's why I leave to run the shelter while I'm gone. But we have some great things coming up. Jeremy Atkinson spends spending time with some great extensions for Photoshop, and shares its findings. Jason Cross tries to answer the question: What exactly is DirectX 10? Meanwhile, Victor Lo takes over another NASA drive. Finally, we'll be announced the first weekly winner of the fashion case Friday. Be and be sure to check out ExtremeTech's weekly podcast. And speaking of inmates in the shelter, be sure to watch the last DL.TV, with those nut guys, Patrick Norton and Robert Heron. Go to the main content of the wedding after the wedding, there are some melodies that always make the final cut. From party anthems to rock ballads, old to country classics, these perennial favorites are guaranteed to take people to the dance floor. If you're making your own playlist or working with a DJ, there are certain songs that are essential to your reception. Wedding planner Julia Pavlovsky suggests guests give guests the chance to put down a song they'd like to hear when they're RSVP. It's really useful for a DJ as he's structuring his list of songs because he already knows these are songs that guests want to hear so he can work them out in his playlist where they make sense, she says. Meet expert Julia Pavlovsky is a wedding planner based in Seattle. Alternatively, you can create a station with a sign with DJ Put Your Record On with a bowl and slips of paper where guests can make enquires. Again, this will allow the DJ to work requests into his playlist in a way that feels natural. This is our election for the 100 most requested wedding song receptions of all time. 01 out of 100 Lyrics love: Because I got a feel (Woooh-oooh)/That tonight's going to be good night 02 of 100 lyrics love: Come on, dance/jump on it!If you're sexy then flauts it 03 out of 100 Lyrics of Love: But you dance, dancing, dancing/dance/And'n't nobody leavin' soon, so keep dancin'/I can't stop the feelin' 04 of 100 Lyrics of Love: I look and look so deep into your eyes/touch you more and more every time 05 out of 100 Lyrics of Love: I'll be your shoulder/I'll love suicide/I'll be better off when I'm older. /I'll be the biggest fan of your life 06 out of 100 Lyrics love: Right foot let's trample / Left foot let's stomp / Cha cha now y'all / Now is the time, to get funky 07 out of 100 Lyrics love: Oh, I want to dance with someone / I want to feel warm with someone 08 out of 100 lyrics love: Because I'm happy / Clap together if you like happiness is true 09 of 100 lyrics love: Take me by the tongue and will know you / Kiss me 'till you're drunk and I'll show you all the moves like Jagger 13 of 100 Lyrics love: I came to come down, I came to come down, I came down / So get out of the place and jump around! 14 out of 100 love texts: She says: come get me / So I stood up and followed her to the floor / She said, Baby Let's Go 15 of 100 Lyrics love: I do everything to fall in love with a girl like you / Because you can't run and you can't hide / You and I are going to touch the sky 16 of 100 lyrics love: It's a beautiful night, we're looking for something dumb to do / Gay kid, I think what I want to marry you 17 out of 100 lyrics love: You do, we want to say / I do, I do, do 18 of 100 lyrics love: Babe, this is what you come for / Lightning strikes every time she moves 19 out of 100 lyrics love: Tonight / I just want to take you higher / Throw your hands in the sky / Let's set this party on the right side 20 of 100 lyrics love: Ooh (coh) baby, you got it all / Sexy from her head to her eyes / And I want it all, n' all 21 of the 100 lyrics of love: Here's how we do it / It's Friday night and I feel good 22 of 100 lyrics love: Party crasher/Panty snatcher/Call me up if you a gangsta/Don't be fancy, just get dancy/Why so seriously?
